compelling treatment of a question pervading literature from antiquity when is hope a good thing and when is it not this collection of essays strikes new ground in our understanding of kierkegaard s either or and his authorship

as a whole

philosophers of religion are often caught up with the epistemic justification of their religious beliefs rather than the qualities of the religious life that make it valuable mark bernier argues that hope is one of the most important of such qualities and is an essential thread that connects despair faith and the self the task of hope in kierkegaard reconstructs kierkegaard s theory of hope which involves the distinction between mundane and authentic hope and makes three principal claims firstly while despair involves the absence of hope a rejection of oneself and a turn away from one s relation to god despair is fundamentally an unwillingness to hope this unwillingness is directed toward authentic hope conceived of by kierkegaard as an expectation for the possibility of the good secondly hope is not simply an ancillary activity of the self rather the task of becoming a self is essentially constituted by hope thus when in despair one is unwilling to hope one is in fact rejecting one s task of becoming a self thirdly faith stands in opposition to despair precisely because it is a willingness to hope an essential role of faith is to secure the ground for hope and in this way faith secures the ground for the self in short authentic hope what kierkegaard calls spiritual hope is not merely a fringe element but is essential to kierkegaard s project of the self
